New Norway Tiles Mix of Fashionable Wood and Porcelain

Craven Dunnill's new Norway range of porcelain tiles offers a fresh take on the ever-popular wood look. The 'planks' are fashionably long at 840mm x 218mm and the surface texture is lightly grained. Such is the sophistication and quality of the print process, the wood grain appears totally random and convincingly natural across the four colour options, which include a fashionable silver/white and dark grey.

The glazed Norway tiles are available in a natural finish for internal use and a grip finish for external locations, creating a continuous floor from inside to out. Both finishes deliver a high resistance to staining and water, which are key requirements for most home owners. These properties ensure that the Norway porcelain tile range is suited to both walls and floors, in all locations, including bathrooms and kitchens.

Norway features the latest technical attributes expected of high quality floor tiles and meets the exacting ISO 13006 UNE EN 14411 standard. It is offered in either natural or a slip resistant grip finish. The natural finish has a R10 rating for internal dry applications and the external grip finish achieves R11 slip resistance Class 3. The glazed tile surface meets PEI Class 5, delivering low water absorption, good abrasion resistance and high stain resistance.

Norway is offered in four wood-look colours: a White, Grey, Natural and Noce, and one plank size: 840x218mm which retails at around £39.45m².

Craven Dunnill is an award-winning distributor and retailer of contemporary floor and wall tiles. Norway is one of several new ranges recently introduced into the company's popular Renaissance Collection.
